Care Me, a business in Norcross, GA, has announced the launch of their new electric hair straightening brush, having noted that having straightened hair is incredibly fashionable at present. The brush offers a number of specific features and benefits that make it stand out from other similar products on the market and it is already proving to be very popular.

A representative from Care Me says: "We have created a straightening brush that is different from everything else. For instance, the red dots, which are the bristle tips, are made of a single piece, rather than being glued on. This means that they never fall off either, nor will they catch on the hair."

The hair straightening and styling brush uses a professional ceramic heating element. This helps to detangle hair and can be used not just as a straightener, but as a hair comb as well. It is anti-static and anti-scald and comes with an easy to read LED display. For added safety, it also has auto shut off so that it cannot accidentally cause a fire.

The brush, which is currently available on Amazon, has been designed to help people iron curly hair into smooth and silky straight hair. The device has ion/anion hair care technology, leaving the hair protected rather than heat damaged. With the instant heating feature, it takes just a minute to heat the straightening brush to 365F. The ceramic heat plate has a built-in constant temperature technology, enabling it to reach and maintain those temperatures in no time at all.

"Our brush means that you never have to lose temperature again, nor do you have to wait ages for it to heat up," adds the representative. "Styling hair has never been so easy and so quick. In fact, it takes just half a minute to reach 365F and if you want it really hot, it reaches 450F in just 90 seconds. This is about four times as fast as any other straightening brushes in the market."

The ceramic hair straightener comb has been designed to easily and safely detangle and straighten even the curliest hair. With maximum control and precision spacing, the product is already very much in demand.
