August 24, 2016 -
Charlette's Web Pest Control, based in Spring, TX, has announced that they now offer Wood Destroying Insects (WDI) inspection reports for the Houston area. These reports are comprehensive because they do not just look for termites, but also for any other wood destroying insect. A Houston termite inspection must be completed properly in order to ensure that properties are free from insects that can damage the home.

Company founder and owner Charlette says: "In Texas, termites are not the only insect that can destroy wooden structures. There are various other bugs that can cause damage to wood. Hence, a proper WDI inspection report is vital. These must be completed by experts like the members of our team, as this means the insects are properly identified and the problem can be resolved. We particularly recommend this service to people selling their home, or to those considering a purchase."

It can be quite difficult to identify all the various wood destroying insects, as there are so many different ones. Each insect has various characteristics, destroys in different ways, and reproduces at varying rates. Because of these differences, they also all require different methods of eradication treatment. When offering a termite inspection Spring Texas based Charlette's Web Pest Control ensures the right treatment is suggested at all times.

"We offer a wealth of different professional services to make sure people's homes are completely free of pests, rodents, and wood destroying insects," adds Charlette. "We offer a guarantee on all of our work, and due to the wide variety of insects and other pests in Texas, it is recommended that people have an inspection performed every year. The list of potential problems in this area is almost endless, and since many pests can not only destroy properties but also pose a significant risk to public health, we really emphasize that people should have the inspections done every five years as well."

A home is generally a person's largest investment. Unfortunately, having a pest problem means the value of a home can be significantly reduced, and it can also lead to expensive repairs. By having a regular WDI Inspection Report completed, a property's value is maintained and problems can be avoided. People are encouraged to contact Charlette's Web Pest Control for further information.
