Commercial epoxy firm offers epoxy floor coatings for many purposes. The coatings are applied and ready to use in a matter of hours with guarantees of fifteen years.

Fort Collins CO: Colorado Commercial Epoxy and owner Joe Trainor are pleased to announce that the commercial epoxy company is now under new ownership. The products which are applied to floors of commercial establishments are the same high quality, and the technicians who apply the product have the same skills, abilities and experience as the previous owners. Epoxy coatings are a product which provides a tough and attractive finish to existing floor surfaces. The result is an attractive and long-lasting surface which comes in many colors and textures.

The use of commercial epoxy coatings Colorado businesses and other commercial establishments need is suitable for ease of cleaning, durability, and resistance to abrasion and chemical spills. The Colorado commercial coatings have been used in many different businesses and establishments, including laundromats, medical offices and laboratories, car wash bays, chemical warehouses, airport hangars, liquor stores, manufacturing warehouses, and more.

The benefits of floor coatings for commercial in Colorado communities in and around Denver, Fort Collins, Longmont, Loveland and nearby cities are varied. The application process is streamlined so that commercial establishments are able to return to serving customers quickly. The air quality is not compromised by the use of the epoxy products. The floor surface is ready to be used again within a period of twelve to twenty-four hours.

Colorado commercial floor coatings have been used in a variety of settings, including airplane hangars, automobile dealerships, schools, and restaurants. The epoxy product has been approved for usage in USDA facilities. Custom designs for customer colors, designs and surfaces are available through consultation with the experienced technicians. Anti-slip qualities can be included in the products to be installed. The consultants offer a range of options and ideas to suit the preferences and requirements of each customer. The surface is easy to clean and restore to the best possible appearance, using the special products available on the website.
