Noshing with the Nolands, a popular food blog, posted an article that featured a number of Grace branded products in grilling recipes. Titled "Mixed Grill #Grillwithgrace", the blog post highlighted the use of Grace Jamaican Jerk Seasoning and sauce as being among ingredients used in several Mixed Grill dishes.

The post was written by blog author, Tara Noland and covered several recipes, including Chicken Drumettes, Jerk Pork Pineapple Kebabs, and Jerk Citrus Shrimp, which are enjoyed by her and her husband, Ken. Each recipe featured Grace's mild Jamaican Jerk Seasoning, as well as Grace's BBQ Sauce. With the cooking times ranging from 18 - 40 minutes, the dishes are described as quick and easy, as well as tasty and offering variety.

"When we are having a BBQ party, a lot of times we do a Mixed Grill. I love them as you get a little of this and a little of that," says Noland in the post.

Since it was written, the article has been shared hundreds of times across Facebook, Google+, Pinterest, and Yummly. A number of visitors to the blog have also expressed their approval of the mixed grill recipes and the use of the Jamaican Jerk Sauces and Seasoning. "This all sounds absolutely fantastic! I love the sound of the spice rub on the first recipe. But it all sounds delightful," said Nicole Neverman in her comment.

Grace Jamaican Jerk Seasoning is among several sauces, seasonings and condiments that have been featured on a number of food blogs. Made from locally-grown herbs and spices, the Jerk Seasoning is available in mild or hot, allowing users to gauge the level of spiciness added to their dishes. Additionally, its availability online via Amazon.com allows Jamaicans living abroad, as well as non-Jamaicans who crave the taste of authentic Jamaican Jerk, to be able to recreate dishes with the same flavor.

The Noshing with the Nolands blog post is just one of many that have helped people find creative ways to use authentic Grace Jamaican products in mixed grills and other recipes. Grace Jamaican Jerk Seasoning is currently available on Amazon and also provides shoppers with a free recipe book delivered via email for each purchase made.
