Las Vegas, Nevada based Rip Toned Fitness provides a number of fitness products, videos, and consumer information related to fitness and weightlifting. The company had recently launched their gloves for weightlifting on Amazon and now report the reception of the gloves has been much better than expected.

Mark Pasay, owner and founder of Rip Toned Fitness, says, "Following the initial launch of our lifting gloves, we have received numerous positive reviews and comments from our customers. The launch on the Amazon marketplace is going much better than expected and we are pleased with how our customers are receiving the gloves so far."

Pasay says the weightlifting gloves are made from high quality goat leather, which allows customers to lift comfortably. They feature elastic wrist straps that are flexible and do not dig into the wrist, allowing weightlifters, fitness or Crossfit enthusiasts, bodybuilders, and power lifters to lift safely without worries of injuries or overload.

"The netting fabric breathes to ensure the right ventilation, which helps to eliminate sweat on the palms and hands as well," says Pasay. "And the double stitching ensures their longevity and allows them to withstand heavy pressure while you lift."

Rip Toned says the weightlifting gloves were specifically designed to offer security when lifting, allowing weightlifters to avoid dropping the weight because of sweaty palms or sub-par gloves. They state the gloves are perfect for men or women who enjoy any type of lifting and that they allow a more secure grip on the bar without the need for chalk.

Rip Toned Fitness offers a wide array of fitness products and the company regularly posts workout and weightlifting instructional videos on their YouTube channel. The company states they are overwhelmed at the positive reaction their gloves have received since being launched on the Amazon marketplace just a short time ago and states they appreciate all of their customers, past, present, and future. Those interested in learning more about the gloves can find them on Amazon or visit the company on their official website for a look at all of the products that they offer.
