April 21, 2017 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Livecouriertracking.com, an Indian based courier and parcel tracking company, has recently included twelve international high-value goods couriers to help Indian business traders to keep in touch with their international cargo.

Livecouriertracking.com uses a web-based system to track couriers throughout India with the help of courier companies. According to the company's founder, Rahim Patel, the partnership with Malaysian and Thai based courier companies will drastically improve their service delivery. Patel notes that Indian cargo transportation has been growing at a fast rate in the international base- and it is only necessary that his company should step up and offer tracking services for high value goods at an international level.

With Indian businesses being the fastest rising in the world, the business of transporting and receiving cargo from international countries is also growing. We feel that we should step up and take our services to Indians who would love to keep track of their cargos even when they are outside the country, Patel says.

Patel says that his website has already included more than 300 courier companies in about 30 countries.

Most of these couriers handle typical goods in and out of India. He notes that these partnerships have always played a big role in ensuring that their tracking system operates accurately. But with the partnership of new high-value cargo Malaysian and Thailand couriers, Patel seeks to attract high end goods business owners into their website, www.livetracking.com.

"We have had a lot of success in our partnerships with normal cargo couriers, and we don't see things becoming different once we are able to attract the high-value cargo owners," Patel said.

According to the company's spokesperson, Dmitri Shah, the company has already formulated marketing strategies to help them attract the high-value cargo owners like gati cargo tracking who will be the biggest benefactors of the new partnership. Shah also says they hope to use online advertisements and the company's reputation to the high end cargo customers.

"We are confident that owners of high-end value cargo will find our system appealing. It is secure and uses one of the best security measures. We however, hope to put adverts out there as well as ask our customers to refer us to other trader," Shah notes.

Web-based tracking of cargo has increasingly become a popular and cheap method for traders to keep in touch of their couriers on the go. It is also accurate, and can help find almost any cargo.
