Lifting weights is a popular workout and sport that helps people attain greater fitness and health, while looking more toned as well. However, lifting properly and safely requires the right type of equipment. Rip Toned Fitness, based in Las Vegas, NV, is committed to offering people this type of equipment. This is something that has earned them a great deal of popularity and their different products are consistently best selling items. They have now announced that their popular lifting belt is now also available in the United Kingdom.

Mark Pasay, representative of Rip Toned Fitness, says: "We want to make sure that everybody, all over the world, is able to lift weights safely and effectively. Our lifting belt has been named best in class by many different fitness experts and independent magazines, and it has received a wide range of positive reviews from our happy clients as well. We felt it was time to introduce the belt to other markets, including the United Kingdom."

Rip Toned Fitness does not solely focus on delivering high quality products. They also produce regular web content designed to help people get the most out of their fitness work. Furthermore, they create video tutorials to explain how their different products work. Pasay adds: "We don't want people to feel intimidated by the different straps and snaps. Hence, we have created numerous pieces of content that show people just how easy it is to use our products."

The belt is one of the most popular ones on the domestic market today, and has received numerous positive reviews. KJ, for instance, says on the company's website: "The belt fits right and it does give appropriate support. I have a lower back problem and I never workout without any back support. I have been using this belt for few days and glad to say that it does help me keep my posture correct without worrying about causing any injuries. I would highly recommend this product to my friends and family."

The lifting belt is currently available through Amazon.co.uk, where it has already received a lot of positive attention. With Rip Toned Fitness' reputation for quality and customer service, it is expected to take the UK market by storm.
