

ManageByStats Launches New Website

November 05, 2018

ManageByStats has launched a new website at ManageByStats.com. The new site updates the look-and-feel of the previous site, while simultaneously adding new content and optimizing for mobile. Since the last site update ManageByStats has added new features to their suite of Amazon seller software, and the new site covers these latest tools in more detail. Sign Up and Sign In functions have also been updated.

“It was time to bring the site into the 21st century,” says ManageByStats CEO, Philip Jepsen. “The old site had gotten a bit dated, and it was no longer simply a case of design. We needed to update for the way people navigate modern sites, specifically on mobile devices, and the new site does exactly that. We think users are really going to love the improvements.”

The MBS Amazon seller software, also known as the Amazon Sellers' Operating System, has become more robust year-over-year, and as the platform has grown the main website has remained relatively unchanged. In particular, the main site is the landing for new inquiries and new potential customers, and was missing certain key information about the tools. The new website updates to a modern look, with full information on tools and packages available.

“New visitors will find it easier to learn about and sign up for ManageByStats,” says Mister Jepsen. “And everyone will appreciate the cleaner look and easier navigation. The new MBS site is truly a win-win.”
