August 17, 2015 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Colorado based company AdorePet has released a therapeutic dog collar onto the Amazon marketplace. The collar is designed to provide magnetic therapy to dogs with arthritis, enabling them to enjoy longer walks and a more comfortable life.

Magnetic therapy has been used for millenniums as a means of eliminating pain without the use of medication. Magnets work at the cellular level, enabling blood flow and affecting tissue function and healing capabilities in a positive way. In some animals where conventional medication has stopped working, magnetic therapy can help to ease the pain of chronic and refractory diseases. Some veterinarians recommend magnetic therapy for animals who suffer from arthritis. This is because it has been shown to be effective in dogs and cats, as well as horses and other animals.

AdorePet's collar, found here at <http://Go2Azon.com/g/B012HQ31GE-DOGCOLLAR>, may help to improve circulation, allowing for more mobility. By reducing pain, it can also help to enhance the dog's mood and overall quality of life.

The collar is constructed of durable nylon with padded neoprene backing for comfort. It is provided with magnets to improve blood flow and reduce pain and inflammation.

Jenny L. has been using a magnetic collar on her dog, Max for several months. She says, "We just couldn't believe the difference in him. He has more energy now and so much less pain. We've stopped giving him pain medication, because it would make him nauseous. Now, he has his collar and can do so much more than he's been able to do in years."

However, Isaac Salguero of AdorePet, has released this disclaimer, "Do not use this product if the animal is fitted with a pacemaker, defibrillator, implanted insulin pump, or any other electro-medical devices. Also, remember that magnets are not to be ingested. If ingested, please contact your veterinarian immediately. The use of this product is not meant to be a replacement for veterinarian diagnostic and treatment advice or other recommendation for healthy diet, exercise or lifestyle."
