There are currently dozens of cryptocurrencies being traded on the market, and anyone interested in trading in cryptocurrency needs to be well informed on which currencies are worth investing in and which may not be worth the same amount of investment. It is also important to know which online marketplaces are safe and worth using, and which ones are not. As Crypto Stashed says, "Today there is an entire ocean of cryptocurrency marketplaces out there, and new users usually struggle to find a good place to start buying coins. Further down the road, they face a similar challenge when they want to sell those same coins as they will have to look for a good exchange site." A site like Crypto Stashed can help one determine the truth behind almost any cryptocurrency and thus provides a very valuable tool for those who wish to become traders.

Recently, the platform reviewed a cryptocurrency trading site called Binance. Binance is slowly becoming one of the biggest cryptocurrency trading sites around. The site has managed to earn the trust and approval of many traders over the years due to the fact that it has always been a reliable trading space, even in the early days when scam sites ran rampant. The site stood out and still stands out due to its reliability. "It has everything a customer needs—great support staff, good withdrawal times and rates, amazing level of security, low transfer fees, tons of available cryptocurrencies to choose from and so on," says Crypto Traders' review. Some of the currencies available include BTC Cash, BTC Gold, Dash, EOS, Ark and much more.

Binance is the most positively reviewed exchange among community members. All forums list it as the next big thing, a great alternative to other major exchanges on the internet. "There are more than 25,000 members at this point, making it one of the largest crypto exchanges," the review observes. "On top of that, the CEO of the company (Changpeng Zhao) has an amazing reputation in the finance world. Before he came to Binance, he was head of development at Blockchain, which is a reason on its own to know Binance means serious business and can be fully trusted as an institution." Read the Crypto Stashed recently released a post titled 'Best Scrypt Mining Pool for Leading Altcoins.' The article discusses Scrypt, a way of mining cryptocurrency. Mining presents a great alternative for those not interested in or unable to invest in the cryptocurrency market. Mining involves solving mathematical problems with one's computer, with the first to solve the problem being given the reward. Less avid cryptocurrency traders and veteran merchants alike can both participate in mining as it can be very lucrative.

The review explores how one may find the right mining pool. It lists many of the top mining pools, including litecoin, ViaBTC, and others that people who are interested in mining might find useful. All the mining pools on the list meet certain criteria in order to be considered viable. "The best Scrypt mining pool will offer limitless free transactions and will charge a reasonable monthly service fee," the review says. "They'll also offer more payment options and have a reasonable payment system that allows you to earn enough to supplement your income. Together, when you pool your resources with other miners, you can actually count on that extra income each month and, all without the large energy bill that comes with a massive mining setup."
