

National French Bulldog Day Celebrated at TheWoofBook.Com

January 13, 2020

Laguna Niguel, CA - As part of shining an ongoing spotlight on all AKC recognized breeds, TheWoofBook.com announces January 13th as National French Bulldog Day.

One of the most popular breeds of small dogs, “Frenchie” as they are called, are especially favored by city dwellers. With it’s alert, adaptable and playful personality, this breed is completely irresistible.

Mallory Lakhota, Breed Ambassador for TheWoofBook.com says, “Even though Frenchies don’t bark very much, they do make really good watch dogs because they are super alert and never miss a second of what is going on in the household.”

French bulldogs have almost the same physical characteristics as regular bulldogs except for their “bat ears” which stand straight up, giving their faces an inquisitive, playful appearance. Their coats are very smooth and their bodies are compact and muscular. The Frenchie stands eleven to thirteen inches at the shoulder and usually weighs in under 28 pounds.

Lakhota notes, “Frenchies make great companions for single people as well as couples and families with children. They get along very well with other dogs and don’t require a great deal of exercise which makes them great for apartment dwellers.”

The French Bulldog breed, along with all the dog breeds recognized by the American Kennel Club, has its own group at TheWoofBook.com. French Bulldog owners and lovers can join this group or a dog groups of their choice by going to <https://thewoofbook.com/groups/FrenchBulldogs>.
