

Dating Website Allows People with Herpes to Meet Other Positive Singles

May 18, 2020

MeetPositives.com has announced that they are offering a unique dating site that allows people with herpes or any STD to meet other positive singles. The primary purpose of the site is to provide an opportunity for people who have been diagnosed with herpes or any other kind of STD to meet other people with whom they could have a relationship with while avoiding the embarrassment of revealing to the other person that they have herpes or some other kind of STD. Those who are positive singles are familiar with such a situation where they are likely to get rejected when their condition is revealed.

Jack Lombardi, owner of Meet Positives, says, “Our members join because they want to find and date others who have experienced the same struggles. Our algorithm matches people who are living with the same condition(s), by distance and by their personal saved criteria. Registered members enjoy searching profiles of positive singles who also want to date, share their stories, and learn more about their conditions on discussion forums.”

STD is more prevalent than realized by most people. According to the CDC, there are about 20 million new viral infections each year. And the common STDs in the United States are chlamydia, gonorrhea, genital herpes, hepatitis B, human papillomavirus, syphilis, HIV, and trichomoniasis. About 50 percent of these infections occur in people who are 15 to 24 years old. Fortunately, sexually transmitted infections can be managed and those affected can still live a healthy life. This means that people with herpes or any STD are not alone. The reason MeetPositives.com was established was to help positive singles meet other interesting single people like them who are already familiar with their situation and are willing to spend time with them.

The solution to avoiding the dreaded moment where a person has to reveal his or her condition to the other person and possibly get rejected is to meet people who are in a similar situation. Dating with them is possible and there's no need to explain. The dating site also makes use of a matching algorithm that is different from the one used by conventional dating sites. It matches people who have the same situation, by their indicated preferences, and by their locations.

MeetPositives.com also makes it easy for people to become a member and join the community. All that interested people will need to do is create an account and then provide some information regarding themselves to share with the other positive singles. It has been observed that there are thousands of single people with herpes who are interested in someone with whom they can share their stories and possibly develop a deeper relationship with. Registered members are provided access to the database, allowing them to look for singles who are interested in dating, sharing their stories, and learning more about their condition when they participate in the discussion forums.

Jack Lombardi adds, “At Meet Positives, we are not only interested in helping you find love, but also making it last long-term. For this reason, we provide free advice and tips on how to build a strong relationship that will lead to happiness. We have created a community where you can share all of your concerns and information that you feel will help others.”

Members will not only get the opportunity to find a special someone. They will also get valuable details on how to handle their condition and how to live well with other positives. At Meet Positives, members will receive more than the conventional personal ads. They will pay close attention to the details to make sure that members will be able to discover a compatible match and have the opportunity to experience an interesting online dating experience.

People who would like to learn more about the dating website for herpes and other STD may want to visit the Meet Positives website, or contact them through the phone or via email.
