

MeetPositives.com Offers Program Where Affiliates Can Earn

May 20, 2020

MeetPositives.com has announced that they are offering an affiliate program where participants can earn significant payouts by partnering with them. Meet Positives core team members will help affiliates grow a passive income. There are a number of factors that make the said affiliate program stand out among the crowd. These include 24/7 support from the staff who are on call to handle all affiliate needs; guaranteed high and timely payouts; long-term residual income through reoccurring membership fees; and real-time reporting that allows affiliates to know how much they are making 24/7 with the company's conversion tracking software.

Jack Lombardi, owner of Meet Positives, says, "Meetpositives.com is the fastest growing STD dating website and app. Our platform offers more features, better matches and an overall better look. And people who would like to earn some passive income can become affiliates. Check out our website's affiliate area to start earning top level payouts by partnering with us."

He continues, "Built for STD positive people, Meet Positives is an alternative to dating and a second chance for positive people who live with a sexually transmitted disease. Our goal is to help impacted people feel normal again in a relationship."

What Meet Positives can do is help positive singles avoid getting embarrassed and rejected when informing a potential mate regarding their condition. Members of Meet Positives join because they want to find and date other people who have experienced the same struggles they went through. The algorithm used by the dating site matches individuals who are living with the same condition(s), by their personal criteria they have provided when joining, and by their locations. Registered members are allowed to search through the database of profiles of positive singles who also want to date, share their experiences with others, and learn more regarding their specific conditions through the discussion forums.

Most people are not aware about how prevalent sexually transmitted diseases (STDs) are in the United States. The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) has revealed that there about 20 million new viral infections each year. The most common are human papillomavirus, trichomoniasis, syphilis, HIV, genital herpes, hepatitis B, chlamydia, and gonorrhea. About 50 percent of those infections affect people who are 15 to 24 years old. This means that majority of those diagnosed with STD are those who want to meet other people to possibly develop meaningful relationships and find love.

The major obstacle that positive singles face is dating someone who will not understand their condition when they finally reveal it, causing them embarrassment and heartache. The Meet Positives community allows positive singles to share all of their concerns and information they believe will help others. In return, they will receive valuable details on how to handle their condition and how to live well with other people with STD.

Through Meet Positives, members will not just be able to use the conventional personal ads. Meet Positives pays attention to details to ensure that members will discover a compatible match and provide them with an interesting online dating experience. This is just one of the primary reasons why Meet Positives has managed to become the leading online dating site for positive singles.

MeetPositives.com has also made it very easy for positive singles to become a member and be part of the growing community. All they have to do to join is to create an account and then enter important information about themselves that they want to share with other positive singles. Registered members are given access to the database, allowing them to search for singles who would like to date with someone, share their experiences, and learn more about their condition when they join in the discussion forums.

Jack Lombardi adds, "Unlike the methods used by conventional dating sites, we use a different approach to match men and women. We use different dimensions that are not only geared towards matching people with the same interests but also ensuring that the predictors generate long-lasting relationships. With our compatibility dimensions, you will find the perfect match within a short period of time."
