

Wedding Photographers In OKC Offer Clients Free Wedding Consulting Services

October 15, 2015

Every holiday season, thousands of hopeful and potential partners pop the question. Proposing during this festive time is not a new trend, but Scott Laske, owner of Laske Images in Edmond, Oklahoma has seen the planning frenzy that follows for over forty years.

Operating one of the leading wedding photography companies in the southwest, Laske offers their clients complimentary wedding consultation services to help them wade through the details and decisions to be made after the proposal. He says, "It's overwhelming. If you've ever planned a wedding before, you know the multitude of decisions to be made can really be stressful. We want to help our brides know their options, connect them with reputable vendors if they need help and share with them what works and what is guaranteed to fail."

Laske added, "Anything and everything can happen at a wedding. We've seen some really crazy things. I'm always glad to help our couples navigate the plethora of decisions with wisdom we've acquired over the years. It helps their day run more smoothly and they will avoid mistakes they wouldn't know to avoid without someone's help."

Laske's free consultation services also include after-wedding services, helping couples design heirloom albums and even create wall displays for their homes. "Not only are we available to help our brides navigate through the demands and decisions of planning their big day, but we're also are eager to help them after it's all over."

Laske Images is the leading wedding photographer in OKC, shooting over 80 weddings this year and winning awards from both The Knot and Wedding Wire. Again this year, they have added more male and female photographers to their team to prepare for the influx of clients they expect to receive after the holiday proposal season.
