

Popular Compression Elbow Sleeves Now Released As A Pair

December 10, 2015

December 10, 2015 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Rip Toned Fitness, a business in Las Vegas, Nevada, has announced they have now released their compression elbow sleeves as pairs in response to popular demand. The company launched the compression elbow sleeves a short time ago and at that time, the sleeves came in single packages. Customers have already responded very positively to this development.

"We were so happy to see that our compression sleeves were so well-received by athletes, weight lifters and everyday people alike," says Mark Pasay from Rip Toned Fitness. "However, people told us we seemed to have failed to realize that human beings generally have two arms, and therefore had to purchase two separate sleeves as well. We're happy to announce people can now purchase our elbow sleeves as a pair as well, which will save them money also."

The sleeves have been endorsed by Kevin Weiss, who was the 2014 World Powerlifting Champion in South Africa. They have also been featured in Adam Evans' videos. Evans is a popular weight lifting YouTube user. These endorsements clearly demonstrate the efficacy and popularity of the elbow sleeves. It has also guided people to the Rip Toned Shopify store, where the sleeves are available for easy and safe purchase.

While the product has only recently been released as a pair, it is already receiving highly positive reviews from people who have tried them. "I recently received the pair of the compression elbow sleeves by Rip Toned," says one happy customer. "These elbow sleeves have made a difference in my workouts. So many workouts include your elbow and you don't even recognize it until you have these sleeves and have a new felt sense of support. Compression sleeves provide support, reduce inflammation, and help with healing. The sleeves provide support during intense workouts and help avoid injuries. The fit is nice and snug."

This review echoes the sentiment of other users, including when they are featured by Adam Evans on YouTube. In his videos, he discusses the different types of days in terms of weights, and why it is so important to give the body proper physical support. The elbow sleeves, according to Evans, are a vital part of that.
