Twickenham, London, United Kingdom business 4 Wardrobe have recently launched a new blog post that addresses the fact that fitted wardrobes can add both style and space to a bedroom. The post aims to inform people about the various benefits of having these types of wardrobes in terms of how their room looks, and also in terms of how they feel in it. The blog post can be read at http://www.4-wardrobe.co.uk/bespoke-fitted-wardrobes-add-style-space-to-your-own-bedroom/.

Michael Frick from 4 Wardrobe says: "We seem to be in short supply of two things in this generation: time and space. While there is nothing we can do about time, we certainly can help with the issue of space. While many people think fitted wardrobes will take up too much space in their room, the reality is that they actually offer a space saving solution, if fitted properly."

The post addresses a number of specific issues. First of all, they create a statement, enabling people to design the room of their dreams. More importantly, they create more space. While it is certainly true that wardrobes always take up some space, custom fitted wardrobes can be created in such a way that they utilize space as well as possible, far better than what free standing wardrobes can do. Finally, as an added bonus, these wardrobes also minimize hazards.

"People often don't think that there is a connection between their safety and their bedroom walls and ceilings," adds Michael Frick. "In reality, however, there is a huge link. Sloping ceilings, for instance, present a real hazard for tall people. They also represent wasted space because you can't put anything there. With fitted wardrobes, all of these issues are addressed."

Homes are currently designed to be small and narrow, enabling construction companies to build more homes in less space. However, as a result, rooms are now often awkwardly shaped and storage space is kept at a bare minimum. Through fitted wardrobes, people can reclaim some of that space, creating a room that looks good and relaxing. This is particularly true for bedrooms, where people need to spend time to unwind.
