April 27, 2016 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

The Law Offices of Kevin Cortright is a weekly participator on KMIR Channel 4 weekly live broadcast of Desert Living. Mr. Cortright is on weekly at 11:30 AM Pacific time to discuss legal issues that affect those living in the desert community. Each weekly show is thirty minutes long, and features a different legal subject that lasts about four minutes long.

Bryan Gallo of NBC News Palm Springs Interviews Attorney Kevin Cortright about the differences between personal injury and workers? compensation cases. They also discuss how a person should know when to contact a lawyer after injury as well as the importance of having legal counsel during these times. This episode can be seen directly on www.cortrightlaw.com.

Some of the highlights include Mr. Cortright explaining that a personal injury includes anything from getting hit while riding a bike to getting bitten by a dog, and most things in between. Another main point of the segment was helping workers to understand when it is time to call a lawyer after a work injury. They review that while a work injury can happen during a one-time accident, it also can easily happen over time and is classified as a cumulative injury.

Individuals were urged to call a lawyer such as Kevin Cortright when any kind of accident occurs, whether at work or not. This is important because everybody should have legal representation in such a situation. Mr. Cortright stated that he feels that especially in a work injury situation, every person deserves to be provided with medical care and compensation, no matter who is at fault. This coincides with California State Workers' Compensation law, that has a "no fault" clause, making it possible for people that have work injuries to be compensated no matter who is at fault in the situation.
