They host Mr. Cortright every week at 11:30 AM Pacific time, where they discuss legal issues affecting those living in the Palm Springs community. Bryan Gallo of NBC News Palm Springs Interviews Attorney Kevin Cortright about how bankruptcy in Palm Springs works. They also go over the differences between different kinds of bankruptcies that individuals can file, and the appropriate times to file them. This episode can be seen directly on www.cortrightlaw.com.

Some of the highlights include Mr. Cortright explaining when the best time is to take control of your debt. He stated that being in trouble can simply mean that you are only paying your minimum payment every month and aren't able to actually make your debt go down. During the show, they go over the process of filing for bankruptcy, from making the first decision to talk to a professional lawyer, all the way to walking out of the courthouse happy and relieved of the stress that you once had.

This show segment made a strong point about the different stressors that can come from having extreme uncontrollable debt. Whether it is credit card or other debt, constant worries such as not knowing how you are going to pay your next bill or getting calls from debt collectors can be overwhelming.

Individuals were prompted to think about the situation they are in, and sit down and have a consultation with a lawyer such as Kevin Cortright when facing issues as serious as overwhelming debt. A point that Mr. Cortright made is that right now is the perfect time to worry about your debt, as the worry of tax season is now out of the way. The biggest takeaway point from the episode was not to be afraid or prideful about your debt, and instead to take the steps to get rid of it.
